"Talking to peers, kibbutzing and sharing best practices -- it's very powerful. Even at my level of experience, I still learn new things when I go to these."

- Michael Frankel, LexisNexis Group

"When you can get a glimpse of what is going on in the market, even a tiny glimmer of what can happen, you'll be able to jump on a new trend and get ahead of your competition."

- Kerry Desberg, Owens Corning

"I think networking outside your industry is critical to keep the flow of new ideas coming into your mind, and your organization."

- Jim McComb, Bank of America

"The network of relationships between people, whether the old fashioned kind or via new modern social networks, is absolutely critical to operate with speed across geographies and business silos."

- Polly Pearson, EMC Corporation

"I find it very invigorating to learn from others and adapt ideas from others, rather than always assuming our way is the best way. Sometimes others have better ideas than we do."

- Larry Quinlan, Deloitte

"The book summaries and articles are excellent added benefits."

- Anne Marie Tedesco, CitiBank

"It's very valuable to go outside your own industry to look at the skills and value-added processes from other areas, to see what people in other industries are doing."- Dennis Deering, Diebold, Inc.
